A WORD AS TO THE MESDAG COLLECTION

THIS collection now about to be dispersed in America, its components enumerated and described in the present catalogue, was the private collection of the late Hendrik Willem Mesdag, the famous modern Dutch marine painter, of The Hague, Holland, who died five years ago. Visitors to the Dutch capital, and others interested and versed in the art affairs of the world, know or know of the Mesdag Museum at The Hague, founded, formed and established by Mr. Mesdag. They know also of the Mesdag Panorama there. Both those institutions remain and continue to flourish in the Dutch city. This collection is a separate and distinct entity, intimately related to the Museum, as will presently be explained, in no way connected with the Panorama—which is a spectacle of Scheveningen, the Dutch fishing village and famous summer resort.

This private collection of Mr. Mesdag, with works of his own and works by his wife (née Sientje van Houten)—who signed her paintings S. Mesdag van Houten or S. M. van Houten—together with his studio effects, Mr. Mesdag intended to go to the Netherlands Government to become a part of the Mesdag Museum; his will directed that the Government be invited to acquire it. His death in the second year of the war found his country upset, and although Queen Wilhelmina offered a private contribution toward a fund for securing the collection her Government decided that it was not a time to do so, and the executors of the will were obliged to make other disposition of it. That it was to leave Holland evoked a poignant regret from at least one former Minister of the State.

Mr. Mesdag's home at 9 Laan van Meerdervoort adjoined the Museum (to which he had a private entrance), so it were fitting both home and collection should have gone to the Museum, which now gets neither. The collection represents the surroundings and the carefully selected works of art with which the painter chose to live. His studio was a huge one, hung with Seventeenth Century tapestries. His house contained twenty-two rooms. Its yard ran back to the Peace Palace. One room was entirely given to the works of Charles François Daubigny, his friend of earlier years. He was a man of many friends and carefully chosen intimacies. Mancini was a cronny with whom he exchanged visits. The three Maris brothers were his intimates—even "Thys" (Matthys—Mathew) who lived in England. So were Mauve and de Bock, Roclofs, Israels, Blommers, Bosboom and Neuhuys. And the afternoon cup of tea was a long session.

The famous panels of his sliding studio doors—they are here in the collection—were painted by invitation by Israels, Willem Maris, W. C. Nakken the painter of horses, Edward van der Meer, the landscapist, Philip Sadée the interior and figure painter, Gerke Henkes who is better known in Holland than in America—and there are panels also by the artist and his wife, who wished to number themselves with their works among their friends. (Mme. Mesdag's death preceded her husband's by six years.) Alma-Tadema was a relative, and there is a personal tribute by him in the collection, a sketch of a convivial occasion, which may make Americans pant—but not as the hind after the water brooks.

Hendrik W. Mesdag and his hospitality were known to Americans who sought him out, and who found him easy of access. He was known also personally here in this country, to which he made two visits, the first one in a representative official capacity at the time of the Columbian Exposition in 1893, and again when the Hudson-Fulton Memorial Exhibition was held in this city. On the occasion of the former visit he was already famous as a painter, although it was said of him that he never exhibited his work until he was fifty years old. As a wealthy banker and broker, inheriting comfortable means from his father, he was able to pursue his art in leisurely manner and even before becoming noted as a painter to indulge his taste in art as pleased him, which he continued to do to the end.

The collection is too large for much particularization here. To mention a few names besides those already spoken of, Rousseau is represented by two important works from the Rousseau sale, Corot is included and Monticelli, and Mettling, and among the few Old Masters van der Velde, Palamedesz and van Ceulen. The Millet drawings are numerous, important, fascinating, and include two recorded in "The Drawings of Jean François Millet, with 50 fac-simile reproductions of the master's work", which has an introductory essay by the distinguished French writer M. Léonce Bénédite, the Director of the Museum of the Luxembourg. The Daubigny drawings are remarkably impressive. The Mauve pencil sketches bring Holland over with them, the Mancini nudes in red chalk will bring out the artists in force. The Matthys Maris oil "Ramskopf" was exhibited on loan at the Corporation Gallery of London, the Guildhall, in 1903. The catalogue of that exhibition had this note of the painting: "The painter Mesdag has said of this work: 'That splendid head, in which everything is said that can be said; color, line, tone, expression; the slightly advanced head, with the soft, almost human eyes, I never enter my studio in the morning without my eye falling upon this creature and wishing it "Good Morning."'"

The collection of etchings includes the work of Millet, Vollon, Rousseau, Jacque, Fortuny, Daubigny, Corot and Bauer. Of the great number of water colors, many were kept unframed in drawers, to be taken out and looked at and shown with interest from time to time.

The tapestries are French and Flemish, including Gobelins, Beauvais and Brussels, and number among other subjects "Narcissus at the Water's Edge", "Diana Imploring Jupiter", "Idolatry before Baal", and "Triomphe d'Alexandre", the latter after cartoon by Charles le Brun.

DANA H. CARROLL.

NEW YORK, January, 1920.

332—HOMECOMING FISHERMEN

Height, 35 inches; width, 27¼ inches

7/10-

A Scheldt fishing boat with sails loosely bellying and four men aboard is coming head-on into the white-breaking shallows of a foreground beach where other men and some women are standing in the water about laden kegs or baskets. In the offing are other sail, one following the leader in, under a windy and darkening sky tinged with reflected sunset violet.

175-
SEATED figure of a large-eyed, dark-haired young Italian woman, demi-nue, posed among rich draperies and highly colorful flowers. She faces the left, three-quarters front, and eyes the spectator with frank, direct gaze. Upper body nude, with warm creamy flesh in subdued light, she wears a Leghorn hat lively with ribbons and flowers, and her limbs are covered by a white drapery on which blossoms are lying, hat and drapery catching a high light. In her hand a palm-leaf fan.

334—IN FONTAINEBLEAU FOREST

Height, 39 inches; width, 34 1/4 inches

1300- THE spectator looks upon an outlying section of the forest in sunlight, and through it to more sunshine beyond. Trees in mass in the central distance spread their thick but well-lighted foliage high and wide, against a greenish-blue sky lightly screened by grayish vapor, while beneath their branches the eye travels as through a broad umbrageous tunnel, with a sharp silhouette against the bright light of its farther end. The green of the foliage varies in the sunshine, and considerable of the leafage is brown in partial shadow, while before the mass a small detached tree shows hints of autumn red. In the foreground a blue brook catches flashes of sunshine, and a tall leafless trunk on its bank rises above the picture limits.

UNDER a grayish sky brightened only by patches of white, in the decline of the year, an open wood composed largely of saplings reveals a few straggling brown leaves clinging to gray branches, and the deep tones of a couple of evergreens. H. W. Mesdag

Height, 39½ inches; length, 49¼ inches

THIS painting, or sketch—it is incomplete—is the last canvas upon which Mr. Mesdag was engaged; it was left upon his easel, unfinished. The grayish and but slightly ruffled sea, sweeping entirely across the foreground, and occupying less than a quarter of the picture, is tinted in soft and delicate hues with reflections of a sunset sky of subdued notes, the effect heightened by a white path of sunshine near the centre. The sun is all but submerged in a soft golden glow above a violet shore of indeterminate features.

OUT at sea, which runs to the horizon, the water is gray, and shows occasional sail scattered at far distances. Other craft bulk larger in the white-breaking rollers in the offing to the left. In the foreground to the right, in the shallows, four boats of the Dutch fishing fleet are seen close at hand, their hulls fascinating in the soft, weathered colors of marine service, their canvas weathered in tones of harmonious agreement—dull brick-red, old-yellow and creamy-gray—their reflections coloring the moving green and white water. Men are aboard, and two men have waded waist-deep into the water, one holding an anchor line.

Height, 12¼ inches; width, 11 inches

SMALL half-length figure of a boy, turned three-quarters to the right, with a ruddy complexion and smiling. He wears a rough fur cap and looks down at the jar which he holds. Behind him and in the left background is the round face of a woman standing. Neutral background.

This panel, which bears no signature, recalls the "Laughing Boy with a Beer Jug" in the Hofje van Aarden, at Leerdam, which is, however, signed with the well-known monogram and is larger than the present work. In the Leerdam version the boy is in green, with a parti-coloured cap, and behind him is another laughing boy. This panel is incidentally referred to in the new edition of Smith's "Catalogue Raisonné," 1910, Vol. III, No. 125, p. 34, by H. de Groot; but it is not mentioned in Bode's monograph on "F. Hals."

ANTONIE PALAMEDESZ

352—PORTRAIT OF ANNA VAN BERCKEL

(Wood)

Height, 27¼ inches; width, 23 inches

HALF-LENGTH; three-quarters to the left. In a black dress, large, flat white lace collar and bow, lace cap and two-strand pearl necklace.

Signed halfway down on the left: "AO. 1644. A. PALAMEDESZ
PINXIT.

No pedigree accompanies this fine portrait, and the traditional identification has been slightly erroneous. But there can be no doubt that the facts now collated are correct. For attached to the wall in the right background, and decoratively displayed as if hanging from a knotted red ribbon, are two escutcheons. That on the dexter side is of the Gael family, who flourished at Leyden and Rotterdam in the seventeenth century; their arms were: D'or à deux fasces de gules chargé de cinq losanges d'argent, 3 et 2. That on the sinister, or female, side is circular; it is of the Van Berckel family, who are known to have then prospered at Delft and Rotterdam; their arms were: D'azur à trois étoiles d'or.

1100—
That this is the companion portrait to that of Jan Nicolaes Gael, which was in the Rothan Collection in Paris in 1873, will not be gainsaid. The male portrait, the whereabouts of which has not been known in recent years, is now in private possession in this country. It is signed and dated, exactly as the present panel: "Ao. 1664, A. Palamedesz pinxit." The Gazette des Beaux Arts, 1873, Vol. VII, p. 278, reproduces the male portrait, and states that "from a few lines written in Dutch on the back, we know that the elegant sitter was called Nicolaes Gael, who was born Aug. 3, 1606, and died Nov. 2, 1666. Not merely is this name lost in the immense oubli, but one is readily persuaded that a gentleman of such fine breeding must have played an important rôle in his time. The picture is as acceptable as the person represented is sympathetic. Very fine taste has marked the execution of the portrait." The man in that picture is turned three-quarters to the right, wears a large, flat, lace collar; his right hand is on his hip. The male portrait was included in the sale catalogue of the Rothan Collection (No. 85) in Paris, May 29, 1890. It is therein reproduced and fully described, and the measurements exactly tally with those of the present work. When transferred in recent years, the inscription on the back of the male portrait was removed. It bears, high up on the left, the écusson armorié of the husband, and beneath it are the signature and date. Thus the inscriptions, the elements of composition and the measurements make them companion portraits. Moreover, it is to be noted that Palamedesz was born and worked for a time at Delft, where members of the Van Berckel family lived.

HALF length; three-quarters to the right; looking to the front. Wearing a black suit, linen undershirt and cuffs. Long brown hair falling profusely on to his shoulders. The left arm resting on a pedestal, the right has the palm extended downward. Green curtain background.

Inscribed on the back: "Actais sua 40;1668," the looseness of which spelling suggests that a reliner has ill copied what he saw. Moreover, the date was probably 1663. In any event it is a mature, and even late, work from the hand of Johnson, who is not known to have called himself Janssen, although he is usually so referred to. He left England in 1643 with a Speaker's warrant to pass beyond seas, and spent the rest of his life in Holland, but he is not heard of later than 1664.

WILD BOAR HUNT. A pendant to the preceding, and part of the same great production. The scene a park adjoining a palace,—the palace gardens with fountains playing occupying the center of the picture in a blaze of sunshine, a classical wing at the left and common housing buildings in the background, and trees abounding at either side. In the foreground two dogs are already upon a wild boar wounded but still running, and coming over a hill crest at the right is a spearsman with a companion who is winding the horn of triumph. Soft and varied coloring in the greens and browns, with yellow and golden-ivory and dull crimson, accented by white.

TRIUMPH of Alexander the Great. From L'Histoire d'Alexandre, d'après Le Brun (eleven tableaux); No. 11—Le Triomphe, ou l'Entrée dans Babylone. The youthful hero, laurel-crowned and holding his mace, stands in a chariot of honor drawn by an elephant, whose rider swings a censer. Ahead are musicians, horsemen follow, and one horseman rides up to the passing chariot from the foreground, directing some trophy bearers. Female figures are seated in the left of the foreground, and in the background spectators look down from the balconies of Babylon. Floral scroll border. Throughout a rich variety of color in soft, low tones.

L. Baumert

379—GRAND GOBELINS TAPESTRY

Seventeenth Century

1120-

Height, 10 feet 4 inches; length, 15 feet 4 inches

BIBLICAL subject. Confusion of figures, mounted, seated, and prone on the ground. At right a king, crowned and in purple and gold, a female's head appearing in his lap, while with gesture he wards off another woman who is also restrained by still another. A man lies prone at his feet. At center is a horseman who turns, frightened and in supplication, at the vision of two figures aloft who as angel bowmen are shooting arrows from the clouds. At left is a companion already wounded, his horse brought down. In a landscape of trees and birds. Wide border of garlands, with bird and animal medallions at the corners and at the centers of the sides. A companion to the following lot.

J. Baumuster.

381—GOBELINS TAPESTRY

Seventeenth Century

Height, 10 feet 2 inches; length, 10 feet 8 inches

F. Baummeister.
Seventeenth Century

Height, 10 feet 3 inches; length, 17 feet 7 inches

S75- PROFANE subject; a pendant to the preceding. Diana imploring Jupiter. In a palatial pavilion in a spacious garden Jupiter is enthroned, above and at the center, Hera seated, embracing his knees with one arm, extends the other over the back of a peacock, her emblem, toward a plumed warrior who is seated below in company with a coronetted lady. At left Diana kneels, appealing. At right is Bacchus making love, also a second couple. Rich wide border of scrolling garlands embracing animal and bird medallions.
